

IT & software

You wish to market your brand new app internationally and offer it in a range of languages, in order to reach out to as many users as possible? The software you develop or distribute should be available in various languages? As a developer or producer of a computer game, you wish to tap into international markets and require localisation that strikes the right note and is tailored to the cultural peculiarities of the respective target market? Then you are in the right place with CrossLingua, because our translation experts are not only familiar with the linguistic aspects of a high quality translation, they are also capable of overcoming the technical challenges that arise when translating in the IT and software sector.

At CrossLingua we naturally also ensure that your code or your database suffers no impairment. We only translate the content that requires translation. And because we deliver your translation in its original format, the reintegration of the translation into your software poses no problem either. This is made possible through the use of state-of-the-art translation technology.

We translate for you:

Software, computer games, installation instructions, manuals, requirements specifications, Privacy Policies and much more besides.
